

GIVENCHY

Multistrand necklace, £3,750, Givenchy by Riccardo Tisci

Jewellery goes all Mr T!

03

MORE IS MORE

Madonna chose to wear it for her 50th birthday party last week, fashion bloggers are obsessed with creating an affordable homage to it, and 'it' is so influential that normally sane women are wearing their entire jewellery collections all at once. There's little doubt, Riccardo Tisci's £3,750 necklace for Givenchy is the hottest piece of jewellery – probably ever. Oversized, layered chunky chains in burnished gold, adorned with crucifix pendants and coins, and with a big serving of bad-gal edge – it totally sums up the mood of the season. We doubt Mr T was Tisci's inspiration, but there's certainly a whiff of The A-Team about the look. However, instead of teaming it with a denim cut-off jacket, Mohican and sneer, à la Mr T, stick to slick, clean, dark lines for a hot gothic vibe. This lust-have wardrobe-transformer (trust us, it goes with everything) has also inspired the Grazia team to DIY our own versions, using lengths of chains from hardware stores. It may be a tad heavy on the neck – but, boy, it's the best fashion fix we've had in ages!

1. Plaited, £199, Lara Bohinc. 2. Plastic, £120, Tatty Devine. 3. Chain, £41.95, crucifix, £19.95, Miglio. 4. Diamante crucifix, £48, Preshhus. 5. Gold, from £22 each, American Apparel. 6. Tiered, from £150, Etro. 7. Gold and pearl, £19.99, River Island. 8. Crucifix, £255, Erickson Beamon. 9. Big links, £135, Boss Black. 10. Multistrand, £18, Oasis. 11. Chunky links, £135, Giles & Brother at Browns

Left: Madonna channels BA Baracus at her birthday bash